

INFO 200 Criteria for Grading

Participation

Students are expected to interact weekly via the blogging community. This can take the form of commenting on other student blog posts, participation in groups, and status updates. Individual INFO 200 instructors may also require participation in discussion forums within Canvas. A minimum of six well-articulated comments (or other participation, such as interacting in or working with groups) is required.

Criteria	Points
Required components	0
Mechanics	0
Comprehension and analysis	0
TOTAL	10

Required Components

This evaluates whether the learner's participation has a solid organizational foundation and includes all required elements stated in the assignment. The learner engages in authentic class participation by commenting on other learners' blog posts, project work, and course community content in ways that demonstrate good timing; where appropriate, scholarly incorporation of class material and LIS models and theories are made; makes six or more well-articulated comments; and successfully creates both introductory and course reflection blog posts shared with the course community.

Mechanics

This assesses the quality of writing and technical aspects of the learner's participation. The participation is engaging and shows evidence of significant thought and effort; it is professional, academic, and grammatically correct, lacking spelling, syntax, or punctuation errors. Learner submits their community blogging site activity feed URL at the end of the semester, as well as any other appropriate URLs.

Comprehension and Analysis

This assesses the learner's broad understanding of the ideas and ability to integrate the ideas into their participation. The learner demonstrates a broad understanding of ideas and provides original thought and inspiration relative to topics of individual interest or expertise via comments on others' blog posts and other course community content.